ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

Congratulation To The Prince of Wales From all Parts of The Globe.

COPENHAGEN, April 5.—The Prince of Wales and his party arrived here at 8 pm. to-day.

BRUSSELS, April 5.—Jeun Baptiste Sipido, the Belgian youth who attempted the life of the Prince of Wales yesterday, was submitted to further examination to-day. His attitude is dejected and he appears very tired, having had little sleep. He expressed no regret for his crime, but has requested permission to see his mother. No interview between them will be allowed for some days.

Late this afternoon the examining magistrate decided to confront Sipido with his father and a touching scene ensued. But it is said Sipido paid no attention to his father's appeals maintaining his previous declarations.

In the Senate to-day the President, the Duke of Ursal, expressed his reprobation and indignation at the attempt on the life of the Prince of Wales. He said:

"I give thanks to heaven that the heir to the British throne has escaped the bullets of an irresponsible boy."

The remarks of the President were greeted with applause.

The Premier, M. de Smet de Nayer, endorsed this speech.

The Patriot says: "Investigation proves premeditation. The interrogation of the prisoner lasted four hours, and it shows that he was instigated by an unknown person, who persuaded him to buy a pistol on Sunday in the Old Market for three francs. Accompanied by this person Sipido went on Tuesday to a meeting in the Flemish Theater and then to the Maison du Peuple, where they had drinks. Then they went to a wine shop, where Sipido wrote a letter saying he had obtained employment. He then went to the railway station and asked the hour of the arrival of the train. Later he entered a neighboring cafe and loaded his revolver in the lavatory. Sipido refused to give the name of his companion, who, he said, was a young man some years older than himself. After Sipido was locked up the magistrate went to the house of his parents."

According to the Etoile Belge, Sipido explained his motive as follows: "For a long time I have thought that the ambitious men who are unchaining war sacrifice so many human lives that they deserve to be punished. Those men should suffer the penalty of retaliation. When I learned by the papers that the Prince was going to pass through Brussels I immediately resolved to become the avenger of humanity and to kill this assassin. On Sunday I went to the Old Market and bought a second-hand revolver and cartridges. I had then made up my mind to carry out my project. I regret that I have not accomplished it as I desired."

PARIS, April 5.—President Louet has sent an officer of his household to the British Ambassador, Sir Edmund J. Monson, to express his keen indignation at the attempt on the life of the Prince of Wales and to ask the Ambassador to transmit to the Prince the President's congratulations on the happy escape of his Royal Highness.

The French papers unanimously denounce Sipido's attempt on the life of the Prince of Wales as a detestable crime and declare English men must not hold "Europe's feeling of indignation against Great Britain's policy in South Africa responsible for the cowardly act of a demented anarchist."

London, April 5.—Congratulations on the escape of the Prince of Wales from death at the hands of Sipido, the would be assassin at Brussels, continue to arrive in numbers at Marlborough House from all quarters of the globe. All the crowned heads and chiefs of states have wired expressions of sympathy.

Vivisection.

There has been earnest discussion in Boston over a bill to regulate vivisection. The sponsors of the bill are members of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The bill provides that experiments on live animals shall only be made "with a view to the advancement or new discovery of physiological knowledge, or knowledge which will be useful in saving or prolonging life or alleviating pain," and that persons performing such experiments shall hold a license from the secretary of the commonwealth. The public discussion of the subject before the legislative Committee on Probate and Insolvency has been characterized by the notable display of intelligent public interest which such matters usually excite in Boston. Among those who appeared against the bill and in favor of leaving vivisection alone were Dr. Bowditch, President Eliot, and Bishop Lawrence. One of the strong arguments against meddling with vivisection was the efficacy of antitoxine as a remedy for diphtheria. Without experiments on live animals there would have been no antitoxine. It was argued that it was highly inexpedient to embarrass or hinder a method of research which had yielded such valuable results. Further, it was held against the particular bill in question that no officer of government or court was qualified to determine who should not.

The agitation against vivisection comes up periodically in many States, and action taken in Massachusetts would undoubtedly have wide influence as a precedent. The anti-vivisectionists usually argue not only that many experiments on animals are exceedingly cruel, but that important benefit has ever come, or will come, from vivisection however conducted. They distrust and disparage antitoxine and all serums, and they are usually opposed to vaccination. The general public, which does not follow them to the extreme conclusions which they reach, is apt to argue that they are "cranks," and that though there is some truth in their allegations of cruelty in certain cases to animals used for experiment, on the whole it is safer to trust to the opinions and consciences of reputable surgeons and men of learning and science. The general public undoubtedly believes in the virtues of antitoxine and vaccination, and in any reasonable use or sacrifice, of animal life undoubtedly believes in the virtues of antitoxine and vaccination, and in any reasonable use or sacrifice of animal life which promises to advance medical knowledge.—Harper's Weekly.
